TAPA Center for Jail Diversion

The Technical Assistance and Policy Analysis Center for Jail Diversion (TAPA) is funded by the Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS) of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) via the Targeted Capacity Expansion Grants for Jail Diversion Programs. It serves as the coordinating center for 20 SAMHSA-funded jail diversion programs across the country. The TAPA Center is also a resource for other communities developing programs to divert people with serious mental illness from jail into community-based treatment. The work of the TAPA Center is informed by the National GAINS Center, which has operated since 1995 as a national locus for the collection and dissemination of information about effective mental health and substance abuse services for people with co-occurring disorders in contact with the justice system. The TAPA Center for Jail Diversion and the Center for Evidence-Based Programs in the Justice System, funded by CMHS in 2002 and 2004 respectively, comprise the National GAINS Center.

Successfully Working with Adults with Mental Illness Involved in the Criminal Justice System

workshop overview

Professionals working at the intersection of the criminal justice and mental health systems often face substantial obstacles because they are unfamiliar with how the other relevant systems operate on a day-to-day basis. This workshop will provide mental health and criminal justice professionals with national and state-specific information to assist them in working with people with mental illness, many of whom have co-occurring substance use disorders, who become involved with the criminal justice system and whose treatment may be supervised by the courts.

Participants will receive current, essential information about:

- Adults with mental illness who are involved in the criminal justice system: do their needs differ from those of other individuals with mental illness?
- How the criminal justice system operates in relation to adults with mental illness, including the availability of jail diversion programs for individuals charged with crimes.
- How the mental health system operates in relation to adults involved in the criminal justice system.
- Issues that may arise for service providers when people are mandated to treatment by the courts.
- How to more effectively work with clients with mental illness involved in the criminal justice system.

Continuing Education Units

Pending approval from appropriate accrediting organizations and agencies, the TAPA Center will offer continuing education credits to certified case managers and certified counselors at both locations and, in Texas, to chemical dependency counselors, licensed professional counselors, and social workers. The Substance Abuse Training Project attests that this one-day event is approved by the Michigan Certification Board for Addiction Professionals. Five and a half (5.5) contact hours will be provided. For more information, contact Adam Kirkman at (866) 518-TAPA ext. 260 or akirkman@prainc.com.
